UPDATE: Heavy Rains Prompt Closure of Comal River in New Braunfels

New Braunfels, Texas — Due to heavy rains earlier this morning and the resulting run-off, the flow of the Comal River remains too high and fast to allow for recreation. Therefore, the Comal River in New Braunfels will be closed to recreation for the remainder of the day today, Sunday, May 17, 2015.

River conditions will be reevaluated on Monday morning and a determination will be made about whether recreation can resume or not. Another press release will be sent following that decision.
