New Braunfels Public Library Public Computers Unavailable June 10th

New Braunfels, TX - The Public Library's public desktop computers will be temporarily unavailable beginning at 10:00 a.m. this coming Wednesday, June 10th, in order to accommodate a migration and improvement of the printing and reservation management software utilized by the library.

These public desktop computers will become available again at an undetermined time later that day, following the successful implementation of those changes. During this time period the wireless network will still be available for patron's to connect to the internet, along with all other library services. Only the public desktop computers and public printing will be disabled.

"The library staff appreciates your patience and understanding as we work to improve your experience here," said Ben Philbrook, Library Services Specialist.

For more information about this temporary interruption in service, please contact the library at 830-221-4300.
